John Maxtone-Graham is one of the world's most articulate maritime historians. On Friday evening, November 10, 2006, he will give a one-hour illustrated talk, a deft and evocative history of those Cunard immortals that contributed so much to the legendary passages documented in his authoritative book "The Only Way To Cross".

Informative, entertaining and devastatingly well informed, Maxtone-Graham is a consummate performer.

He spends more than half his year lecturing to cruise ship passengers all over the world and is delighted to re-embark aboard the Mary exactly half a century after he crossed eastbound on her from New York to Southampton, Captain Bill Law in command.

At a reception before the talk, he will sign books that are for sale on board. Audience members who already have their own volumes should bring them along for dedication and signature.
